POSTMASTER OF ARIZONA WHO RUNS HIS OFFICE TO SUIT HIMSELF.

Beld the Papers of His Successor and the Job and Dropped His Wife Into the River-Awaiting Execution for Murder.

Ehrenburg is the name of a postoffice somewhere down in the wilds of Arizona. So many complaints have come into the general postoffice at Washington that In spector Waterbury was sent to investigate. Arrived at Ehrenburg the postoffice was not very difficult to locate. It was one of The poorest of the strangling adobe huts which constituted the town at the time. But the postmaster was nowhere to be found.

A compadre of his was met after a while who spoke English. "Hayzoos" would be back in a few days Inspector Waterbury was told. The other name of "Hayzoos." which in English is Jesus, was Daniel, which information it took a long time to clicit. The distance was too long and the way too difficult to traverse to leave his mission unaccomplished, so inspector Waterbury sat down and waited the pleasure of Jesus Daniel.

Mail Kept for Eleven Years.

After a lapse of five days Jesus arrived at Ehrenburg in his birch bark canoe. The Inspector was not long in forming his acquaintance. He told Jesus Daniel the purpose of his mission. The Mexican gave asivage grunt of understanding and gruffly acquiesced to showing Inspector Waterbury through the postoffice. The examination was at once begun. Shutters were thrown back, doors unbolted and the two sat down in the musty atmosphere. The safe was first opened. He found some of the people to whom the letters were addressed and delivered them. There were hundreds of letters lying about, many of them directed to people who had long been dead. But Inspector Waterbury's great find was two commissions from subsequent administrations for men appointed to succeed Jesus Daniel as his successor. One of these men died in ignorance of his appointment and the other was kept in ignorance of it by the astute Jesus.

Drowns His Old Wife.

When confronted with the pile of documentary evidence against his ability or character or ignorance, or all three, Jesus Daniel Just grunted, which said plain as English could make it: "What now, if you have discovered it?" Inspector Waterbury saw that there was no use in argument. The postmaster was of the brute type, too ignorant or cunning to volunteer or give under pressure an explanation.

After the two men had left the postoffice Jesus Daniel was met by some acquaintances who greeted him after their fashion. From the look of horror which crept over the faces of all of them Inspector Waterbury ventured a remark as to what caused it. "He took his wife up the river and bury ventured a remark as to what caused it.

"He took his wife up the river and drowned her, he says," said one of the bystanders.

"You took your wife up the river and drowned her, did you?" a-ked the astounded inspector, as he looked at the immobile features of the man beside him.

"Yes, I drowned her." doggedly replied the Mexican. "She was no good any more. She got old and sick and ugly, and she bottered me. I asked her to step out of the boat and get a flower for me that was in water. When she was out I pushed her into the river and got away quick when I see that she can get up no more." Jesus that she can get up no more." Jesu Daniel is now awaiting execution for mur
